"St. Elmo."

"St. Elmo," the novel that every woman knows, and every man will accordingly be obliged to take her to the full content and approval of the authors, Mrs. Augusta J. Evans Wilson, and the special attraction Saturday, October 16, matinee and night, at the Broadway theater.

What makes the event of interest is the fact that Willard Holcomb, who dramatized "St. Elmo," successfully produced his play in Richmond, Va., the wartime home of Mrs. Wilson, and received her approval as well as exclusive rights to stage her story.

The scenes are all laid in the south, in the vicinity of Chattanooga, Tenn., and at "La Sagace," the home of the Murphys in Georgia, and the period gives opportunity for quaint costumeing. Seats on sale at the box office and usual places on Thursday, October 14, at 9 o'clock.

Little Girls as Apple Trees.

How would you like to live in an apple tree that had no blossoms in the springtime and no apples in the fall?

Here are four little girls (although two of them are dressed as boys), who live in four little dwarf apple trees for eighteen minutes every night, and then change to dancing girls when the trees break open. The little girls—Ruth, Edith, Mary and Helen—are stage children, and play in a big musical show.

In one of the big song numbers, called "The Sign of the Songbook," the children are hidden away in the four apple trees and no one can tell where they are. When the song is over, the apple trees open and the trunks of the trees turn out to be the little bodies of the girls, the arms and legs representing the branches. And then the audience knows that the dwarf apple trees which they have been watching for eighteen minutes are not trees at all, but have been transformed into four pretty little girls, all covered with flowers and leaves.

The little girls shake off the flowers, hold the leaves in their hands, and dance about the stage, while the audience sits in wonder at the funny little moving apple trees. These little girls can be seen tonight at the Broadway theater in "A Broken Idol."

"Freebooters," Stirring Story of Express Robbery.

What promises to be one of the most thrilling motion pictures of the season will go on exhibition today at the Breed Theater and is entitled "Freebooters," being a wonderfully strong picture of the great west.

It is a story of the robbery of the Wells-Fargo express company to the amount of $20,000, and the subsequent search for the robbers. The sheriff secures the pair of villains, but in their desperation they fight themselves free of the officers and make a thrilling dash for the trail that leads to the spot where the booty is hidden. The officers discover this spot, but not until the robbers have left it carrying all the money. A mountain boy has seen the strange pair, and follows them unnoticed to the cave where the plunder is concealed. In leaving the spot, the boy meets the posse formed to find the robbers, and goes and stealing up the mountain side overturn a huge boulder that rolling down the mountain side strikes the watching posse and injuring the sheriff sufficient to disable him. A thrilling chase ensues and the great climax is a wonderful bit of scenery and acting. Splendid Biograph pictures are in abundance and Mr. Roust will sing the newest in the song line.

One Hundred Year Old Curio Owned by Noank Man.

Charles C. Dewey of Noank has in his possession a unique curio in the form of an old wooden slipper that was brought from France by his grandfather, the late Captain John E. Lawey, when the latter was in the foreign freight trade years ago and commanded the brig "Francis." The slipper is fashioned from a single piece of light wood and is of a style singular to the pointed toes of a short time ago. It has a single ankle-strap of leather, which is the only article aside from the wood used in the construction of this peculiar footgear, there being no pegs nor nails. As near as can be ascertained the slipper is about 200 years old and was probably worn by some one of the French peasant class as might be judged from the manufacture.

LOETRY.

"THE INVARIABLE"

I like the man who faces what he
With step triumphant and a heart of cheer;
Who meets the daily battle without fear;
See his hopes fail, yet keeps unfalter-
ing true;
That God is God—that, somehow, true
His plans work out for mortals; not in vain;
Is when fortune, which the world holds dear,
Falls from his grasp; better, with love,
a crust,
Than living in dishonor; envies not
But smiles and words of hope,
Nor ever murmurs at his humble lot,
Who by a life heroic conquers fate.
Forget the past and live the present
hour;
Now is the time to work, the time to live;
The soul with nobler thoughts, the time to will;
Heaven has bestowed, to test our utterance,
Now is the time to love, and better still
To rise triumphant, thus the perfect flower
Of life shall come to fruition; wealth
is gone;
For grandest giving ere the time be gone;
Be glad today, tomorrow may bring
tears;
And golden rays will usher in the day;
Who conquers now shall rule the coming years.
—Sarah K. Bolton.

THE GOOD SAMARITAN.

The time will come within the lives of all
When the sweetest of all recollections
Will be "we guided some poor wanderer
To safety, that too soon essayed to fall."
The thought we want to mercy when the call
Of justice was most importunate, will
Into our ears when scenes of earth
The choral strains of heaven to foretell.
But happy thoughts can rise on generous deeds.
And more than king, though in apparel plain,
Is he who lifts the fallen to his feet,
Who finds the sweetest nectar in the rose,
The rose above the thorn; His love
shall gain
Shall see the glory of his Master's face!

Clever Sayings

"See here, sir! Where have you been?" "My dear, I will give you full particulars in due time. I have the data, but it has been entrusted to a friend."

"We view things differently in this world." "That's right. When the girls all smile, one man will puff with pride while another, the citizen addressed, will say, 'I don't know what's funny about his makeup.'"

"Under what kind of a tree," inquired the song writer, "does the Eskimo make love?" "Under no kind of tree," answered the citizen addressed, "I am glad to say that there is no vegetation in the extreme north."

"You say you won your husband through wearing a $2 graduating gown?" "I did." "How romantic! I suppose you are very happy?" "Oh, yes. But that $2 gown was an awful bad buy. I don't know what you can do till you try John. Try it on two for awhile. It will make better reading for your biography when you get rich."

"If I was a big corporation lawyer," began the party of the first part. "If I was a big corporation lawyer," commented the other half of the sketch, "instead of handing it out free from the top of a molasses barrel."

"I'll give you two cents a week," said the country merchant. "I can't live on less than four," declared the ambitious boy. "I don't know what you can do till you try John. Try it on two for awhile. It will make better reading for your biography when you get rich."
